

TAPE (Russ. Lit.) OUR FATHER

Some weeks ago, I was reading for you in those Midday Prayers some extracts from a book of Michel Quoist, 'Christ is Alive'. It's an attempt, and a plea, to make the living of our Christian lives more involved in and growing out of the modern contemporary society of which Christians are necessarily part because we're human beings. The demands of a mature Christian faith and way of life today are different from what they were in a different world — though one might argue about the degree and depth of change that has taken place in the human condition in our lifetimes. I mean, Michel Quoist's viewpoint may not be acceptable to everyone. Still, he does have an outlook that may be very helpful to many — and he puts it better than I could summarise it. So, today, a little more of Quoist: Q.

[Christ is Alive: p 118-21]

To make a start back at this point, here's a prayer in music,
the Agnus Dei from Notre Florence MUSIC - PRAYERS

Notre
Florence