

Prayer of St Francis
(Another Dawn)

Well, I hope you've been enjoying your holiday weekend. Today's public holiday is one of the few chances that many people in HK get to relax a little from the pressure of work and living in the heat of summer. In a society so dominated by economic considerations as we are, it's an occasion to be thankful for — play, holiday, enjoyment are, I think, rather neglected sides of the human situation, on the whole, today; human needs which still don't get considered enough, generally, and can't be catered for entirely by government orders or mass, organised recreation. Anyway, spare a thought today, for those who don't have a holiday because their work or service is needed for others to be able to play. And for yourself, on holiday or not, a song for today: To everything there is a season:

Turn, Turn, Turn MUSIC: PRAYER

A little more music now, for this holiday Monday: and again it's inviting you to turn around: the Second Heart choir of Southend-on-Sea, England, <sup>v.o.</sup> with their own song 'When the Flood of the

When the Flood... Music changes -- " MUSIC: PRAYER
[Galliard 4003]

And finally, appropriate for today,

<sup>v.o.</sup> something about rejoicing in the work that we do: the monks of Weston Priory sing their own 'Hosanna' MUSIC

"Wherever you go"
