ANGELUS

I concluded last Thursday with some reflection on the coming of the Kingdom, which is the message of Christmas. Today, is a rather different form, that same coming. It's really about how we live a Christian life, in the time between: for Christ's coming began something that still goes on and hasn't yet reached its conclusion. And what we celebrate through the year, on ordinary days as well as the big festival times, is the time between, in which we live, inspired and patterned on Christ's life and the Word of God which is more than a mere record of what happened once long ago.
